hold. This demonstration of the people's will, under all the circumstances which led to it, shows us that the electors of this city are ardently attached to a pure elective franchise; suffering—being without water or provisions—they succeeded that they will sustain those of their servants who honestly in reaching the Island where they were kindly received by exercise their best judgement in the performance of daty, and will defend them against the persecution of official power. It also demonstrates that the combined efforts of sordid so. cial and political influence, cannot destroy the people's devotion to principle, or prevent their expressing their hatred of corruption. With such a constituency, the performance of the most ardians duties is a pleasure, because the agent is assured that his honest efforts will be appreciated, and that his labors will be rewarded by the people's approbation."
